CHAUTAUQUA MEETING TONIGHT

Upon the interest shown at the stockholders of the Utah Chautauqua assembly at 8 o'clock this evening in the city hall, rests the future of the Chautauqua institution in Ogden. It is the earnest desire of the directors that all holders of stock and others who are interested in Chautauqua work attend the meeting for, unless the directors feel that there are enough citizens in Ogden who appreciate what has been done along highly educational lines, and are willing to support the movement, Ogden may cease to be the home of the Chautauqua in this state.

SPEEDING WITH THE FIRE AUTOS

As a result of a complaint registered this morning by Chief A. B. Canfield of the fire department with the police and juvenile authorities, that exciting but dangerous pastime by which youthful drivers of motor vehicles attempt to outdistance the automobiles of the fire department during runs threatens to be ended. The chief stated that from present indications it is the desire of youthful chauffeurs and motorcyclists to boast that during a run to a fire they have outdistanced the fire apparatus.

As an incident, showing the dangerous character of the practice, Chief Canfield stated that during the run to the fires at Twentieth street yesterday a boy driving a taxicab, converted into a baggage wagon, kept ahead of the chief's auto along Grant avenue. Afraid to pass the boy, the chief reduced his speed, which seemed to give the boy great joy, as he thought his remodeled car was surpassing the famed auto of the department. The chief stated that had he tried to pass the young man on the avenue, with so much traffic there might have been an accident. During all runs, the chief declared, that the machines are surrounded by a swarm of motorcyclists, all traveling as fast or faster than the fire autos.

MINE HAS GOOD SHOWING OF RICH ORE

The officers of the Overland Mining & Milling company, including C. W. Hestmark, Dr. Conroy, and William Everett, are highly pleased over the latest reports of developments on the property, brought down by David Shields, who is in charge of the mining operations.

There is 500 tons of ore on the dump ready to be shipped on receipts of the results of assays now being made in Salt Lake.

The Overland property is situated east of Willard and comprises eleven claims, which have been under development twenty years, and on which one tunnel 1200 feet has been driven.

COMPLAINS AS TO THE CANYON

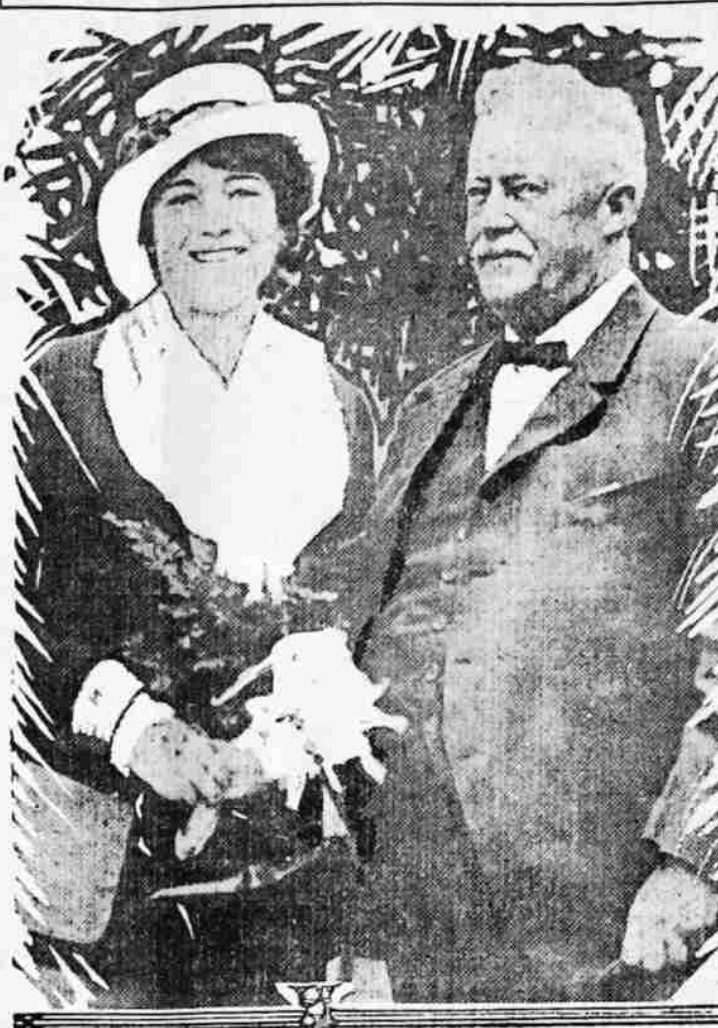

Editor Standard: Only pride for the reputation of our city, and jealousy for the morals of our young men and women, induces me to write this article. The following facts were told me by a Salt Lake woman who spent the afternoon of pioneer day in Ogden canyon and whose word can be depended upon.

She says that liquor was served in great quantities on the grounds. A perfect stream of men brought out arm loads of bottles from the old saloon buildings.

During the afternoon she saw young men some mere boys, straggling drunk, so intoxicated in fact that their mouths hung open, and their faces bore a vacant, expressionless look. Three young men were stretched out by the roadside, dead drunk, with the flies swarming over them—a most repulsive sight.

Four young men boarded the car on which my informant and other Salt Lake women were returning to the city. One of the men persisted in standing on the rear platform and a sober passenger called the attention of the conductor to the fact that the drinking man was not in a condition

U. S. GRANT AND WIFE ON WORLD TOUR; WON'T BE BACK FOR A YEAR AND A HALF

U. S. Grant, Jr., and his young bride.

Ulysses S. Grant, son of the late president, and his young wife, who was Mrs. America Woman Willis, are now on the Pacific ocean, bound for Australia. This is the start of their wedding journey, which will cover a period of a year and a half.

The accompanying photograph of the couple was taken on board the steamship Aorangi, on which they sailed, just before the ship left San Francisco.

Mrs. Grant is thirty-three years old and her husband sixty-one. The wedding was bitterly opposed by all the children of Mr. Grant by his first marriage, except Ulysses S. Grant, 3d, a junior at Harvard. Chaffee Grant, the eldest son, was especially bitter.

The wedding ceremony was performed by a justice of the peace in San Diego, Cal., on July 12, and a week later was announced at a dinner in the U. S. Grant hotel. Only Ulysses S. Grant, Jr. was present of the groom's children, and many old friends of the family remained away to stand there, being in danger of falling off the platform. Sure enough the man lost his hat and the car waited nine minutes while he went back to search for it, presumably a car on another block was also waiting.

There seemed to be some difficulty about the hat being found and one of the Salt Lake women who was compelled to make a certain train reproached the conductor for allowing drunken men to delay decent passengers. This resulted in all four men being put off the car and left in the canyon.

I reminded the Salt Lake lady about the "drinking club law" that had been slipped through the last legislature and in turn she reminded me that on May 27th the "Injunction and Abatement law" also went into effect.

There are scores of Salt Lake people who have declared that nothing could induce them to go to Ogden canyon again during a public celebration of any sort.

I have also heard many Ogden people say that there is no pleasure for them in the canyon and that they never go there any more on account of these disagreeable sights.

Is it not a pity that the greatest show place that Ogden has, and the finest pleasure ground that any city could have should be thus marred and made unsafe?

But the point that I wish to make is this: That there is no law which respects or tends to regulate him, if he possibly can evade it.

It is a well known fact that Ogden canyon has never been perfectly dry. The prohibitory law has always been evaded.

What is the moral to this? The moral is state-wide and nation-wide prohibition. For local option is too local and too optional which is the worst you can say about it, as a certain temperance orator once remarked.

This is so largely because the good citizens fail to take the logical political steps to make it effective, because of the selfish desire of some to profit at the expense of law. We cannot elect men who are not in sympathy with prohibition to office and expect them to enforce the law.

The liquor traffic, itself respects no law that stands between it and financial gain. It is the red-mawed anarchist of them all.

Rome died not for lack of culture, or oratory for public baths and games, for beautiful buildings, for colleges and high society. ROME DIED WHEN SHE BECAME ROTTEN AT HEART. Out of the north came the unspiced goths and vandals. They overran the boulevards of the eternal city; they tumbled down her temples; they buried her proud eagles into the dust.

Out of the east is coming some day to America perhaps a nation of little brown men, unweakened by the excesses of liquor.

Our skyscraper, our macadamized roads, our beautiful parks, and our blood-bought veneer of elegance will not stay them. Only a strong, virile race of undebauched men, whom vice and liquor have not weakened, can maintain the American nation.

Shall coming generations write the history of this country in the words of Rome's disaster?

Let us say No! By the families we cherish and the God we worship, they shall not! Let every true American carry in his heart the talisman "National Prohibition" the eighteenth amendment to the constitution of the United States.

I Must Sell It

I am sort of "between the devil and the deep sea" with this Rum-mage stock. The manager says I cannot take it back to the big store, and the landlord says I must get out of the building before long.

The only way I see out of the difficulty is to get you, the good public, to give me a lift.

I'll do my part by giving you merchandise at prices that will pay you well for the assistance.

Every time I find anything that is not selling fast enough—down goes the price. And that will be the policy until the last basketful is sold.

We open again Tomorrow morning at ten o'clock.

Wheeler creek water constitutes perhaps one-fourth, in any case not over one-third, of the city's water supply, and in my opinion it is absolutely pure. All my campers use the water for culinary purposes, and it is the height of absurdity for anyone to assert that these same campers would knowingly or unknowingly pollute the water that they drink every day. To the contrary, every camper at my resort considers himself a committee of one to see that strangers (picnickers) do not throw refuse in the creek, and any person found so doing is told in brief and expressive terms what he is thought of. At that, not one person in a thousand is in ignorance of the fact that Wheeler creek water is drinking water for the city, and conducts himself accordingly. Every camper at my place is most particular in disposing of refuse to see that it is carried far enough away from the creek bed so that there is no possible chance of pollution. These same campers regard anyone who would take a drink of Ogden river as either an ignoramus, or at the very least most careless of his health, as nearly everyone who lives that far up the canyon has seen some one thing or other around the river which given him anything but a reliable that sort of thirst quencher.

None of us want to see an episode of disease due to impure water supply, and I am confident there will none if the city commissioners devote more of their attention to the sources of the city supply and less to that which comes out of Wheeler canyon.

(Signed) M. E. WILCOX.

WHEELER CREEK WATER SUPPLY

Editor Standard: In view of the statements recently published in your paper concerning the controversy existing between the city commissioners and myself regarding the waters of Wheeler creek, and the manifest unfairness of these statements, I think the facts of the case should be brought to the attention of the public. There are always two sides of every story, if the discussion is to be fair.

The facts in the matter before this talk of water contamination were brought out are these: The city commissioners wished to place their intake for the water supply a considerable distance up Wheeler canyon, the intake and mains to be laid on my property. In my opinion $300 was only a nominal price for the privileges extended. The commissioners thought $100 was the right price. There the matter hung until two weeks ago, when, as reported in the newspapers, the commissioners reached the conclusion that the water of Wheeler creek was being polluted by my campers.

Wheeler creek being only one of the sources of supply for the city's drinking water, I think it would be no less than policy for the city commissioners to be as zealous in investigating the other streams as the water in this canyon. As it stands, it looks to me as though there was a little discrimination shown. What about Ogden river? Is it pure? The campers up where I am and I myself do not think so, and yet there is considerable more Ogden river water being drunk by Ogden citizens than that of Wheeler creek. At the very time yesterday that people were reading in the morning paper that the law was to be enforced in regard to pollution of Wheeler canyon water, workmen from the waterworks were
